OneTime messaging between Whatsapp and Snapchat

31 August 2016 Leave a comment

In August 2016 it became known that data from the messaging service Whatsapp, which had taken over by 2014, will now also land at Facebook. Facebook and Whatsapp are now closely intertwined. Phone numbers from your own address book and user data should be transferred. There should be a 30-day option, where you can contradict certain changes, but not all.

Is it time for an alternative to the only ruler of "news services"?

Yes. That could be. After all, there are many participants who are afraid to become transparent and to submit their own data to Facebook for their own purposes. Actually, the sending of messages, photos and videos should be enough, some thinks. Well, there could be an alternative:

Good for private and business: Just sharing / exchanging contacts	For this purpose simply a location, eg. An address for a meeting, office or residential address, share / exchange	Set up groups: one for colleagues, one for bosom friends, another for family - intuitive and easy known by other fairs.

Features

As you would expect, the app can be naturally transmitted free text messages, establish toll-free phone and video calls and works over Wi-Fi on devices where there is no SIM card. This is done by adding a second device (the tablet at home, for example) in the app. The user interface is intuitive and very tidy. Most of the functions are self-explanatory and probably already well-

It can exchange and share contacts and also locations (eg addresses for the meeting place in your own district or a residential address, etc.), which is very practical. It is possible to insert your own contacts into different groups and there is a so-called broadcast option to discover.

OneTime instant messenger have to date in the App Store and Google Play, encrypts this service all messages caches of any messages, photos or other files and their servers are not in the US but in Europe. More specifically in Germany and France. The data to be transferred are located on the devices of the users; no backup is created on OneTime servers. In the daily application, this is reminiscent of the Snapchat service, where chats and multi-media content are only available for a short time and can not be called afterwards. With Whatsapp, OneTime Messenger must be registered on the handynummer, but there is a great benefit!

OneTime Messenger heard its customers / users

OneTime.World Plc. If you recommend the app among friends and acquaintances, you get a share again when the app is registered by them. This simply works via a text message or e-mail invitation for example.

If one thinks of the stock exchange of Facebook, which initially triggered a spectacle, but in the course of the course now can already have exceeded the $ 50 clearly, then an effort for OneTime shares would be worthwhile.

In addition: Who has ever been a shareholder of a communications company, just for registering an app on the mobile phone?

Where can I get the Messenger?

In browser onetime.world type, then navigate to the respective app store. So far, there are versions for Apple iOS and Google Android. Of course also available directly in the respective app store. You can also use Invite Code 7827471. A hearty thanksgiving included!
